DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gilson et al. 6336934.

3. As to claims 1-4, Gilson et al. teaches an embolic protection device for capturing embolic debris released into a body vessel of a patient, comprising: a shaft member (101) having a distal end, a proximal end and a stop fitting (106, 120); and a filtering assembly rotatably mounted on the shaft member near the distal end thereof, the filtering assembly including an expandable strut (111) assembly and a filter (105) attached to the strut assembly for capturing embolic debris, the filtering assembly being mounted on an outer tubular member (104); a distal spring tip coil (107).

4. It should be noted that Gilson et al. fails to specifically teach an inner tubular member having a length shorter than the outer tubular member. Gilson et al teaches an embolic protection device where a filtering assembly is rotatable and slidable along a guide wire (see abstract). It is well known to place bushings within a device that requires rotation or slidability to provide a low friction surface to allow for rotation or slidability. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to use an inner tubular member/bushing for rotation or slidability.

Art Unit: 3734

5. As to claim 5, Gilson et al. teaches the embolic protection device of claim 2 except for wherein the outer and inner tubular members are made from polyimide. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use polyimide, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.
